

All of my bread ingredients are certified organic, except the yeast, which is grown on organic substrate and produced to NOP standards. Can we label our bread 100% organic?

No. Based on the information provided, because yeast appears on the National List under 205.605(a) as a nonagricultural substance, and all other ingredients are represented as certified organic, the product appears eligible for a label of "organic." Certifying agents are responsible for approving final labels on products certified under the NOP regulations.
